

Take an Imaginary Road Trip

Even if you can't go on a real trip right now, you can still dream up a fun adventure. Write a story about an imaginary road trip that you would like to take. It can be to a real place, or somewhere in your imagination. Use the photographs and questions below to get your story started, but be creative!

Choose Your Vehicle

Every great road trip starts with a car! Choose one of the historic cars below, which are part of the collection at The Frick Pittsburgh. In your story, be sure to describe what your car looks like.

1931 American Austin Coupe

1909 Keystone Six-Sixty Roadster

1914 Model T

Choose How You'll Get There

Describe the amazing things you see as you drive. Tell your readers about the landscape, the animals, the road, and the weather. If you plan to stop along the way, describe what you see and do there.

Choose Your Destination

Tell your reader where you're headed on your road trip. Why do you want to go there? Are you visiting someone special, or visiting a place you've never been? Describe what you'll do once you get there!

Other Details to Think About

Think about the following questions as you write your story.

- Who is traveling with you?
- Do you meet anyone new along the way?
- Do you ever get lost?
- Does the car break down, or does it run fine?
- How long does your road trip take?
